

Writer's Toolbox Filming visit to Wellington Primary School

Over the past few months, your school has been trialling Writer's Toolbox, a New Zealand AI programme for raising students writing achievement. This award-winning programme is being rolled out in the UK and is engaging pupils and staff with its creatively designed and intuitive interface, both at school across the whole curriculum, and at home and we hope you have had a chance to see the tool in action for yourselves!

We have seen on our visits how engaged the pupils of Wellington have been while working on Writer's Toolbox and are keen to share their experiences with pupils and staff at other schools. The school has kindly agreed to let us come to Wellington in the new year, on the 15th of January, with a professional film company to interview some pupils about their experiences. Your child has been selected to participate in this experience, if you are happy for them to do so. The film will be used to share your child's experience of developing their writing skills through Writer's Toolbox with other schools and via social media platforms.

Please feel free to explore the work of Writer's Toolbox further through the links we have provided and if you are happy for them to participate in a short interview at the school, there is a form that you can sign and return to the school.

Thank you so much for supporting us and feel free to get in contact if you have any questions or would like more information.

Yours sincerely,

Kathryn Harper-Quinn and Amy Froggett
